DID YOU KNOW THAT...

We need constructive adults who care and who impact clearly defined standards

It's the young person's choice, but parents can help:

- Focus on your child's abilities and interests
- Discuss possibilities
- Ask for an early meeting with the school's guidance counsellor
- Check educational choices at vilbli.no together with your child
- Accept your child's choice, but help him/her to think it through by asking questions

Let your child enjoy telling you something you don't know...

Be curious about what your child is learning. You can't know everything. The most important thing to do is show interest and ask questions. That's the way to support and motivate your child to learn.

Parents working together

At lower secondary school it's more important than ever that the parents know each other. Together you can be good support for your children.
